ACADEMIC COSTUME

The pageantry and color at commencement exercises reveal a record of academic achievement of the various individuals taking part in the exercises. The following brief description is given so that the audience may more readily interpret such achievement.

In 1895, the Intercollegiate Commission, a group of leading American educators, met at Columbia University to draft a code which would serve to regulate the design of gowns and hoods indicating the various degrees as well as the colors to indicate the various faculties. This code has been adopted by most of the colleges and universities in America and its use has made identification of scholastic honors an immediate activity.

Three types of gowns are indicated by the code. Those worn by the bachelors have long, pointed sleeves. Those worn by masters have long, closed sleeves with the arc of a circle near the bottom. Doctor’s gowns are faced with velvet. The sleeves are full, round and open with three bars of velvet on each sleeve. The velvet facing of bars on the sleeves may be black or the same color as the binding of the hood.

Hoods are made of material identical with the gown and are lined in the official academic color of the institution conferring the degree. If the institution has more than one color, the chevron is used to introduce the second color. Colored velvet or velveteen binds the hoods and indicates the department or faculty to which the degree pertains.

Historical associations of color have been continued to signify the various faculties. Arts and letters can be recognized by the white, taken from the traditional white fur trimming of the Oxford and Cambridge Bachelor of Arts hoods. Red, long traditional of the church, indicates theology. The royal purple of the King’s court signifies law. The green of medicinal herbs immediately identifies a medical degree. Philosophy is signified by the color of wisdom and truth, blue. Because through research untold wealth has been released to the world, science is identified by golden yellow. Oxford pink indicates music, and russet brown, the color of dress worn by ancient English foresters, indicates forestry.

The color of the velvet of the hood is distinctive of the subject to which the degree pertains. For example, the trimming for the degree of Master of Science in Agriculture should be maize, representing agriculture, rather than golden yellow, representing science.

At Michigan State University, it is customary to identify the bachelors graduating from the different departments of study by tassels of the official department color as established by the Intercollegiate Code.

Michigan State University, one of the leading land-grant universities and the first agricultural college in America, strives for excellence in affording liberal and practical education for its students in a broad range of human endeavor.

MSU also serves people of the state, nation and world through its numerous research, extension and international programs.

Now in its 122nd year, Michigan State University has grown from three buildings and six faculty members to one of the largest universities in the nation. It has more than 3,000 faculty engaged in teaching, research and public service, 409 campus buildings, and more than 5,100 acres of land of which 2,010 acres are in existing or planned campus development.

Founded in 1855 to educate youth for the major occupation of that day — farming — MSU has broadened its offerings to meet the educational needs of today. The University now has a Graduate School and 17 colleges — Agriculture and Natural Resources, Arts and Letters, Business, Communication Arts and Sciences, Education, Engineering, Human Ecology, Human Medicine, James Madison, Justin S. Morrill, Lyman J. Briggs, Natural Science, Osteopathic Medicine, Social Science, University College, Urban Development, and Veterinary Medicine. Some 165 programs of instruction are available to undergraduates; 76 departments offer graduate studies.

MSU is unique nationally in that the Colleges of Human Medicine, Osteopathic Medicine, and Veterinary Medicine are located on the single campus.

The Honors College, which enables superior undergraduate students to waive normal graduation requirements and undertake individual programs, attracts many of the nation's finest young scholars. Michigan State University also is a prominent sponsor of the National Merit Scholarship Program, comprised of an unusually select group of scholars.

One of the many innovations in higher education made by Michigan State University is its system of academic-residence halls. Incorporation of classrooms and faculty offices with living, dining and recreational facilities has given these giant dormitories a stimulating academic environment. Each of these nine halls is the center of curricular and noncurricular activities, creating a "college within a college" atmosphere.

The "small college within the larger university" concept was introduced at MSU by the establishment of the Justin S. Morrill College, which offers a limited enrollment liberal education program with an international emphasis. The concept was expanded by the establishment and opening of the James Madison College and the Lyman J. Briggs College. James Madison offers a curriculum for the study of public policy problems within the framework of the social sciences and related disciplines. Lyman Briggs makes available a liberal curriculum for students especially interested in science and mathematics.

Today, almost 45,000 students attend the University at East Lansing. About 85 percent are from Michigan; the remainder includes nearly 1,200 foreign students from 90 countries.
In the land-grant tradition it pioneered, Michigan State University is concerned with research and service as well as teaching. All colleges and the Agricultural Experiment Station are engaged in a wide range of research. Approximately 3,000 individual projects are in process. The University's research tools include the Control Data 6500 computer, a cyclotron of the sector-focused type capable of accelerating protons to 50 MeV (60,000 miles per second), and the MSU Observatory which houses a 24-inch reflecting telescope, a computer and related equipment. Modern facilities include the following buildings: chemistry, biochemistry, psychology research, veterinary medicine, plant science research, natural resources, food science, pesticide research, and life sciences.

Through an agreement with the Energy Research Development Administration, MSU has become a national center for basic research on plants and their reactions to radiation; involved is a $2 million building, a staff of approximately 90 persons and an annual budget of approximately $1 million.

Benefits of the University are brought to every county in Michigan by the Cooperative Extension Service and the Continuing Education Service. Their programs, on and off campus, provide a wide range of technical information and formal course work for hundreds of thousands of Michigan citizens. The Kellogg Center for Continuing Education, one of the finest conference centers in the nation, annually hosts nearly 50,000 adults who come to the campus for some 600 conferences and other educational meetings.

In broadening the scope of educational opportunity, MSU is building on its long experience in continuing education to develop a Lifelong Education Program which will offer University resources to persons who are educationally or economically excluded from the traditional campus programs; to those who seek new skills or wish to update present skills; and to those who wish through education to make their leisure time more productive. The Program also will enable the University to cooperate with local communities in assessing, developing, and expanding their continuing education projects.

Michigan State University's land-grant concept of service is international. Supported by grants from the federal government and private foundations, Michigan State University maintains research and educational assistance projects on a world-wide basis. International projects have given many faculty members overseas experience, adding a new dimension to their teaching.

With more than a century of educational achievement behind it, Michigan State University continues to apply its academic and physical resources to the problems of today and the challenges of the future.

HONORARY DEGREES

Ben Roy Burmester

Since your graduation from this institution’s College of Veterinary Medicine a quarter century ago, you have followed a distinguished career as a research scientist. You have made outstanding contributions to basic disciplines of research and their application in controlling diseases of poultry, particularly the avian leukemia complex. Your original research on viral neoplasms has been internationally acclaimed not only for its importance in the study of animal diseases, but in the prevention and control of cancer in man. Despite your numerous administrative duties as former Director of the Regional Poultry Research Laboratory, and your constant research with other scientists, you have served as an officer in many national organizations. Because of your outstanding record, you have been signally honored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the American Society of Agronomy and other organizations; in 1971 you received our own College of Veterinary Medicine Alumni Award. In recognition of the credit which you have brought to yourself and your alma mater, and the continuing important accomplishments of your remarkable career, Michigan State University is pleased to grant you the degree of Doctor of Science.

Akinlawon Ladipo Mabogunje

Your outstanding career has been that of a scholar of unusual breadth and stature, committed to applying the social sciences to African cultural development. In carrying out that intent, you have excelled in a variety of important roles. You have been a major spokesman for modern Africa in forums held by academic institutions, scientific societies, and international political organizations throughout the world. As a widely known geographer and Dean of Social Science at the University of Ibadan, you have used your knowledge and administrative skills in advancing higher education and in the national development planning of your native Nigeria. Through your extensive writings on urbanization, ecology, forestry and other topics, you have earned a reputation as Africa’s leading geographer. Because of the many contributions which you have made to the well-being of Nigeria and, indeed, to the social and economic future of the African continent, Michigan State University is pleased to grant you the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.

RUSSELL E. TRAIN

Your career as a lawyer, judge and federal administrator has had a marked influence upon the life and environment of America and its people. During your years as a judge of the Tax Court of the United States, you developed a consuming interest in resource conservation which led to a series of important leadership assignments in federal agencies, culminating in your present position as Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Because of your intelligence and tenacity in the face of economic and political opposition, you have made notable progress in developing national land use policy, control of ocean pollution, regulation of surface mining, and other environmental changes. Through international conferences with the Soviet Union, Canada and other countries, you have furthered the recognition of ecology as a key science in the promotion of human welfare and of resource conservation as an economically vital responsibility of every nation. In recognition of your vigorous leadership, and your intellectually creative efforts to maintain a wise stewardship of the environment both in America and the world community, Michigan State University is pleased to grant you the degree of Doctor of Laws.

THOMAS G. WICKER

Throughout your journalistic career you have brought sound judgment, keen wit and an engaging personality to your readers. Beginning as a small town editor in your native North Carolina, you acquired the experience and editorial insight which later marked your successful years with the Winston-Salem Journal and the Nashville Tennessean. Since 1960, when you joined the New York Times, you have become an increasingly important spokesman for justice and truth in the social and political life of the American people. In your distinguished editorial columns, as well as in your novels and other writings, you have vigorously called for moral reform and intellectual integrity in our government and other institutions. American journalism has benefitted from your unwavering determination, your intellectual honesty and your continuing concern with the problems of our society. Because of your important contributions to the advancement of your profession, and your devotion to human dignity in our democracy, Michigan State University is pleased to grant you the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters.
