Board of Trustees Named for MSC Fund; Eight Scholarships Awarded

A seven-member board of trustees has been appointed for the Michigan State College Fund, according to William L. Davidson, '17, fund director.

The MSC Fund was established a year ago for the purpose of raising money to support college activities, particularly research and scholarships, not adequately financed in the budget. Contributions to the program come from alumni, friends of the college, corporations, and wills and bequests, Davidson said.

Prominent Alumni Named

The board of trustees is composed of seven prominent MSC alumni. They are: Lewis A. Smith, '14, Grosse Pointe; Harold H. Gasser, '25, Birmingham; Claud Erickson, '22, Lansing; John J. Korney, '31, Detroit; Norton W. Mogge, '14, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Regina Gabriel Frisbie, '35; and Karl H. McDonel, '16, East Lansing.

During the first two months of existence, the board of trustees awarded an Emeritus Research Professorship grant to retired Dean Ralph C. Huston and four-year scholarships to seven students.

Scholarships Awarded

Receiving scholarships valued at approximately $500 were: Philip Johnson, Bay City; Robert Pettys, Newtonville, Mass.; Jack Wingerden, Hastings; Gwen Forsman, Pontiac; Helen Takacs, Melvin; Lillion Goodwin, Flint; and Joan Rexford, Grosse Pointe. All are freshmen at MSC except Miss Goodwin.

MSC Will Publish Ag Dictionary in 1955

Tentative plans for a dictionary of agriculture to be published in Michigan State College's centennial year, 1955, have been made by an editorial board of college staff members headed by John N. Winburne of the Department of Written and Spoken English.

Supported by the All College Research Committee and the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station, the dictionary will be published by the Michigan State College Press.

Great Need Cited

Prof. Winburne first became aware of the great need for such a publication in his work with foreign students at MSC. Adequate dictionaries covering other sciences existed; for agriculture there were only outdated and incomplete books, some published as early as 1797.

"As the leading country in agricultural research, development, and education, American farm jargon has assumed not only domestic but also international importance," Winburne states.

Both foreigners and city-bred agricultural students are often puzzled by such common-place terms as middle-buster, spring tooth harrow, and riding cultivator, he points out.

Want Strictly Ag Terms

As general editor of the volume, Winburne has begun the task of gathering agricultural terms from all parts of the nation. Implement catalogues, books, agricultural bulletins and other sources will be studied to find words for inclusion in the dictionary.

Citing the complexity of the job of gathering words, Winburne says, "Terms related only to agriculture will be used. For example, 'fence' has its agricultural implications, but it may also imply a certain kind of sword play—such a meaning will not be included in the dictionary."

Program of Off-Campus Courses Begins at MSC

Dr. Harold J. Dillon, a leading national educator, has been named head of an accelerated program of off-campus courses to be offered by the Continuing Education Service of Michigan State College.

Dr. Dillon, who took over his new post in December, was national educational director of Junior Achievement, Inc., New York, N. Y., at the time of his appointment.

At MSC, he will develop a program of regular college courses representing a substantial expansion of existing services in this field. The courses will be offered at various locations around Michigan, and may or may not be taken for college credit. The types of courses will vary according to public demand, according to Edgar L. Harden, director of the Continuing Education Service.

Dr. Dillon was formerly a specialist in educational problems for the National Child Labor Commission, and taught at Michigan State, New York University and Syracuse University. He received his bachelor's and master's degrees from Boston University and his Ph.D. from Yale University.

National and World Convos Will Attract 14,500 to MSC

An estimated 14,500 people will come to the Michigan State campus during the summer of 1951 for national and world conferences, according to Russell J. Kleis of the MSC Continuing Education Service.

The organizations and number of people expected are: International Luther League, 4,000; Boy Scout Executive Council, 3,500; American Society for Engineering Education, 2,500; National Home Demonstration Council, 2,000; National Farm Bureau Training School, 2,000; National Future Homemakers Association Leadership Training School, 350; and Agricultural Marketing Workshop, 200.

MSC "Alumni News" Program Now Carried by Six Stations

The Michigan State College "Alumni News" program, which returned recently to the air waves over the college station WKAR, has expanded its listening area.

The weekly program is now heard over the Paul Bunyan network, a Michigan regional hookup which includes WTCM, Traverse City; WATT, Cadillac; WATZ, Alpena; WMBN, Petoskey; and WATC, Gaylord.

Scheduled time for the broadcasts on the Paul Bunyan network is 1:30 p.m. each Saturday. WKAR will continue to broadcast the show at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, according to John McGoff, '50, program director.

It is hoped that the "Alumni News" program will continue to expand its listening area to include all of the Upper Peninsula, McGoff said.

MSC's Ag Engineering Given Top Recognition

National accreditation has been awarded the Department of Agricultural Engineering at Michigan State College.

Only Six in U.S.

MSC's agricultural engineering department is believed to be the sixth in the U.S. so recognized by the Engineering Council for Professional Development, according to Prof. Arthur W. Farrall, department head. The Council includes all the major engineering societies of the U.S., and is the official accrediting body for American engineering schools.

Farrall

Prof. Farrall said that the examining committee was especially impressed with physical facilities for teaching agricultural engineering, which members called "about the best in the nation." The committee also commended the department for its outstanding teaching staff and graduate and research programs.

Research Cited

Among the most recent research developments drawing praise from the inspection committee were the mechanization of sugar beet culture, the frost machine, rural electrification improvements and other projects, Prof. Farrall said.

An editorial in the Lansing State Journal said:

"We are happy to congratulate the college upon this achievement as well as upon the splendid showing of our favorite college football team. It's gratifying evidence that academic progress at East Lansing is not being neglected in favor of athletic progress and of the fact that MSC's athletic program has not been permitted to impair the college's ability to fulfill its primary purpose as a great and growing institution of higher learning."

Graduate Enrollment Up

Graduate enrollment at Michigan State College jumped more than 10 percent this fall.

The official report of Registrar Robert S. Linton showed an increase in graduate students from 1,412 last year to 1,579 this fall. The rise in the number of graduate students came in spite of a general decrease in college population. This fall's enrollment was 14,993 compared to 16,243 last fall.

MSC Installs Campus Television Network for Teaching and Research

By RICHARD DANDENEAU

Michigan State College will accomplish another "first" next month when a closed-circuit television system is put into operation on the Spartan campus.

It is believed to be the first campus-wide television system for educational purposes to be installed at any major university in the U.S., according to James H. Denison, administrative assistant to the president and chairman of the MSC television committee.

Equipment Purchased

Equipment has been purchased and installation in the Electrical Engineering building is almost completed. The system will link several campus buildings through the central control room.

MSC has already applied for one of Michigan's unused TV channels, and should a channel be assigned and permission to make public telecasts be granted, the present equipment will be augmented by a transmitter, Denison said. Meanwhile, sending and receiving points will be linked by wire, and the campus station will be used as a laboratory for teaching and research only.

To Test Teaching Value

Engineers, speech, radio, and dramatics students will use the studio and control room facilities for laboratory work in the technical and production aspects of TV. The system will be used to determine the value of television as a teaching aid.

The $100,000 video investment is expected to more than pay for itself through teaching, research, and extension—extension being developed more fully when the college receives an outside channel for state-wide broadcasts, Denison said. Meanwhile, movie films will be used extensively for off-campus telecasts by commercial stations.

Though costs are great, officials believe the capacity of television to spread information to more people simultaneously may actually relieve the financial plight of educational institutions.

Even without a transmitter, the potentialities of campus TV are almost unlimited. MSC's equipment will make possible mass student participation in laboratory experiments, lectures, and demonstrations, before seen only by a few at a time.

May Aid Financially

The budget implications of educational television, both on and off campus, are summarized by President Hannah as follows:

"Educational television may well be the answer to some of the problems of financing higher education which plague administrators and worry friends of higher education everywhere. The day may well be at hand when there will be a revolution in teaching methods, which have not changed much since the days of Socrates."

Turning to another phase of the television picture, MSC has taken a leading role in the fight for allocation of a specified number of TV channels by the Federal Communications Commission to educational institutions.

Educational Channels Urged

In December President Hannah, chairman of the executive committee of the American Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities, appeared before the FCC to ask that educational institutions be given their fair share of television channels.

Knowing the unlimited possibilities of campus TV, it is difficult to predict what could be done when educational television is channeled throughout the state and to all parts of the nation.

Through a college TV station, with the cooperation of commercial stations, it will be possible for the television population of Michigan to see how to make a dress, and how to cull poultry flocks, or to sit in on a college lecture or concert.

Gifts and Grants Aid MSC's Research Work

Research work at Michigan State College received further impetus this fall through approximately $50,000 given for new and continuing projects.

Navy Study Begins

The largest grant was $6,000, providing for research on preparation of a special chemical for the Bureau of Ordnance, U.S. Navy.

The National Dairy Council of Chicago gave $3,171 to be used by the Department of Foods and Nutrition for a study of the nutritional status of women.

Also included among the gifts and grants received by the State Board of Agriculture during October and November were two grants for $2,500 each.

One, from the Michigan Certified Hybrid Seed Corn Producers Association of East Lansing, will finance the development and testing of new corn hybrids by the Department of Farm Crops. The other provides for the study of sanitation in design of mechanical dishwashing machines by the Department of Bacteriology and Public Health.

THE AFFAIRS OF STATE

A New Term

Michigan State officials, with a wary eye on world developments, welcomed an estimated 14,500 students back from Christmas vacation Jan. 2.

Registration for the winter term was held Jan. 2-4, and classes began Jan. 5. Students had enjoyed an 18-day vacation, but soon reacquainted themselves with the routine of college life.

A total of 567 Michigan State students wound up their college careers during the fall quarter, which ended Dec. 15.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams spoke to the graduates at informal ceremonies Dec. 12 in the Michigan State College Union. Included among the audience were 117 candidates for advanced degrees and 450 who received bachelor's degrees. These graduates will also be eligible to participate in the college's June Commencement program, according to Registrar Robert S. Linton.

Eighty-two students also completed agricultural training courses Dec. 15, according to Short Course Director Ralph W. Tenny.

Students were presented certificates for completion of one or two year courses in specific fields of agriculture.

Bransdorfer Brothers

Those Bransdorfers sure do get around.

Last month, Steve Bransdorfer, Lansing journalism senior, was named editor of the Michigan State News, campus daily, for the winter term.

When Steve was selected for the job by the MSC Board of Publications, a faculty member remarked: "Seems like one of those Bransdorfer boys had been running one campus publication or another since the beginning of time."

Well, there certainly aren't that many Bransdorfers—only three—but they have established somewhat of a record in MSC publications history.

Arnold, '49, was business manager of the Spartan, humor magazine, during his senior year. Alfred, '50, served as editor of the Wolverine, college yearbook, during the 1949-50 year.

Publications, of course, were not the only attractions for the Bransdorfer brothers. As a combine, they made wheels turn for more than a dozen campus activities, including the Dionysians, Union Board, and just about every type of picture-taking that exists.

The Bransdorfers have been somewhat of a post-war tradition around Michigan State, but the string will be broken next year when Steve graduates. MSC will have run out of Bransdorfers.

Men in Home Ec

Picking the man "most likely to succeed" was simple for fall graduates of Michigan State's School of Home Economics.

He had to be Kenneth W. Goodrich, Lansing, first male in the school's history to graduate with a major in home furnishing and the only man graduated in home economics last fall.

Upon graduation, Goodrich will join a select group of 10 men to receive B.S. degrees from the MSC School of Home Economics.

Though one of few male home economics graduates, Goodrich had plenty of masculine company in the classrooms during his last year. More than 200 men are enrolled in home economics courses.

Primarily a woman's field, home economics is steadily being invaded by men, according to Dean Marie Dye of the School of Home Economics.

So far MSC coeds have not objected "too strenuously" to the male invasion of their domain, she added.

Beautiful Coeds

Spartan students and alumni have known it for years, but it took an article in Parade magazine to show the nation that Michigan State is the college of beautiful coeds.

A two-page feature article entitled, "Is Michigan State the College of Beautiful Women?" appeared in the Dec. 10 issue of the national news weekly.

Band leader Woody Herman said: "This school has the most beautiful girls in the country." Bob Gail, a midwestern band leader, added: "They're really stunning." The article also carried raving testimonials from men of half a dozen other professions.

Pictures of 15 comely Spartan coeds, highlighting the article, provided plenty of evidence that the boast holds a lot of water.

Before the new year, the article had created somewhat of a national furor. All over the country, colleges were crying that it wasn't so.

Michigan State students went smugly home for Christmas vacation. Parade had picked East Lansing for the story, and there wasn't a dissenter on the Spartan campus.

Student Campaigns

Campaigns for a new journalism building and more colorful uniforms for the marching band have been launched by student groups at Michigan State College.

The Journalism Council, composed of representatives from five professional and honorary journalism organizations at MSC, has started a drive to bring "an adequate, permanent journalism building" to the campus, according to Prof. A. A. Applegate, council advisor and head of the Michigan State Department of Journalism.

Alumni of the journalism department will be asked to write college and government officials pointing out the need for a new building and requesting necessary funds.

The Student Council's band committee has organized a similar plan.

Committee members will write to alumni groups all over the world. They will ask for a "yes or no" answer to the question of whether the Spartan band should have new, different uniforms, according to Richard Dougherty, Lansing graduate student, committee chairman.

After alumni and student opinion has been polled, the committee will take appropriate action, Dougherty said.

THE AFFAIRS OF STATE

Faculty Affairs

President John A. Hannah's appointment to two important educational and governmental posts headed the list of faculty achievements this fall.

President Harry S. Truman named Dr. Hannah to the advisory board for the Point Four program of technical and scientific assistance to undeveloped areas of the world. Ten other top educational, business, scientific, agricultural and labor leaders are included on the board.

Hannah's appointment stemmed from a letter he wrote two years ago offering the facilities and aid of the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities for the foreign aid program. The advisory board will map policies of the long-range project in its early days of organization.

Pres. Hannah also enhanced his growing stature as one of the nation's leading educators when he was reelected chairman of the executive committee of the Association of Land-Grant Colleges and Universities. This marked the first time in the history of the association that a college president had been chosen for two consecutive terms as head of the executive committee.

Prof. Paul Bagwell, head of the MSC Department of Written and Spoken English, has been appointed chairman of a national advisory committee responsible for evaluating communications programs offered by U. S. military centers. Prof. Bagwell is one of seven national authorities named to a joint committee of the American Council on Education and the U. S. Department of Defense to examine study courses at U. S. military centers.

"Wild Hunter," first novel of English Prof. Kenneth C. Randall, has been chosen as the April 1951 selection of the Junior Literary Guild. The book, primarily a children's story of hunting in Michigan forests, is being published by Franklin Watts, Inc., N. Y.

Dr. Ralph C. Huston, former dean of graduate studies and professor of organic chemistry at Michigan State, has been given the $500 Emeritus Research Professorship award by the Michigan State College Fund. Dr. Huston, who retired July 1, after 40 years on the MSC staff, is the first recipient of the award. He will use the grant to continue chemistry research.

Dr. C. S. Bryan, dean of the School of Veterinary Medicine, was elected to honorary membership in the Mexican Society of Veterinary Doctors for outstanding contributions to the veterinary profession.

Prof. Ray Hatch, of the Institute of Counseling, Testing and Guidance, was reelected executive secretary of the Michigan Counselors Association at their annual meeting on the MSC campus.

"J" School Selected

Michigan State College's journalism department has been selected as a proving ground for an experimental program designed to train students for work in the classified advertising field.

Sponsored by the Association of Newspaper Classified Advertising Managers, the program will feature lectures by prominent men in the field, and student participation in "internship" jobs in the Lansing area. The project got under way this fall, and will be continued during 1951.

"If the experiment proves satisfactory, the association will recommend the adoption of a similar plan as a regular course for other colleges and universities throughout the nation," Gilbert Gillett, educational director of the national association and director of the MSC project said. Gillett is classified advertising manager of the Flint, Mich., Journal.

Prof. A. A. Applegate, head of the MSC Department of Journalism, explained that classified advertising is a field full of job opportunities for trained personnel, and one that has been overlooked in the past.

Acquainting students with these possibilities, as well as training them to write and sell classified ads, is one of the experiment's aims, Applegate added.

Study Midwest Culture

Eleven grants, totaling $3,771, have been awarded for research and writing projects in Midwestern culture by a Michigan State College committee administering a $30,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, New York.

Nine of the recipients are Michigan State scholars. They are A. R. Gilpin and Norman Penlington, history of civilization; W. H. Knowles, economics; R. M. Dorson, Richard Barton and J. A. Garraty, history; M. J. Segal, social science; George Joyaux, French; and Charles Hampton, written and spoken English.

Grants were also awarded to Mary Land, Cleveland Heights, O., and Prof. R. H. Pearce of Ohio State University. Miss Land received the largest grant of $1,000 for a double biography of Joshua Giddings and Ben Wade. Other grants varied from $100 supplementary awards to $471 for new projects.

The grants to date account for $24,379 of the $30,000 set aside for the work by the Foundation. The entire amount must be spent and the studies completed by June 1952. The three-year writing and research project began in July, 1949.

The awards were announced by Dean Lloyd C. Emmons, dean of the MSC School of Science and Arts and chairman of the committee administering the project.

Dorm Rates Boosted

Dormitory residents returning to Michigan State for the winter term Jan. 2 found a "cost-of-living" increase on their room and board fare.

Food rates for all dormitory residents was boosted $8 per term, and men students received an extra $5 increase in room prices per quarter. Winter term room and board fare reads $188 for men, compared to $175 last year, and $193 for women, compared to last year's $185.

College officials said that the increased rates were absolutely necessary because of rising costs for food and labor.

Michigan State College during the past year has boosted wages of all college employees five cents per hour, in addition to reverting to a 40-hour week with no reduction in total pay. Basic pay for students has been raised 10 cents per hour, and food costs have continued to rise.

College officials added, however, that dormitory rates at MSC are still lower than the average for other large Midwestern universities.

MSC's Placement Director Cites Opportunities for Technical Grads

The problem of Michigan State College's placement director these days is just the opposite of his perennial worry.

More jobs than graduates is the lament of John F. Schlueter, '43, director of the MSC Placement Bureau.

Nationwide Shortage

A nationwide shortage of young technical graduates has brought industrial concerns to the college "crying for engineers, chemists, physicists and men in related fields," he said.

This is particularly true in respect to companies dealing with oil, automobiles and chemicals. Schlueter added that this situation will become more acute under the new "state of emergency" program of the U. S.

Salaries Increase

"At MSC we will be fortunate to fill one-fourth of these positions available between now and April," he added. Jobs in this classification pay fresh college graduates about $275-$325 a month as starting salary, which represents a 5-10 percent increase over last year.

Schlueter attributes the situation to several factors. Included are the complete absorption of the 1950 college class by industry; increased need for technical graduates in stepped-up military defense production; and reluctance of draft-eligible graduates to apply for these positions.

Industrial concerns today, however, are taking qualified persons regardless of their eligibility for the draft, Schlueter added.

"It all adds up to the fact that a top graduate of engineering, chemistry, physics and related fields in the next few years will find many bidders for his talents," Schlueter said.

Police Ad Department Secures Lie Detector

A new wrinkle has been added at Michigan State College in higher education's traditional "quest for truth."

It is a lie detector!

One of Few in Nation

A Keeler Polygraph, one of the few in the nation to be used for college instruction and investigation purposes, is now being used by the MSC Department of Police Administration.

The new machine came complete with a trained operator, Detective Charles J. Becker of the MSC police department, who recently completed a six-week course in polygraph operation and maintenance. Before a polygraph is sold, a representative of the purchaser must complete the course at the Leonarde Keeler Institute of Lie Detection, Chicago, Ill.

The polygraph is being used by the MSC Department of Police Administration to "acquaint students with its use in criminal investigation, and as an aid in actual investigation of incidents involving campus police," according to Prof. Arthur Brandstatter, head of the department.

May Clear Accused

"Used only with the permission of the individual, the polygraph will perform at MSC to clear persons of suspicion or to determine whether they have been wrongly accused," he said.

Det. Becker will assist in demonstrating the machine for teaching purposes, but students will not operate, or learn to operate the polygraph.

Serves 36 Years

A. R. Carter, '04, Rockford, Ill., has been re-appointed superintendent of highways for Winnebago county, Ill., for a term of six years.

Carter has held the post continuously since March 4, 1914. He took office Nov. 1.

College Hothouse Produce

MSC BANANA CROP: Botany Prof. G. Bernard Wilson and Frank Kartje, Milan graduate student, proudly display a seven-dozen crop of Cavendish bananas harvested last month on the campus. The harvest is neither the first nor last banana crop to be grown on campus. The late Thomas Gunson, long-time MSC horticulturist, is believed to have produced the first about 1908. Dr. Wilson expects another yield from his greenhouse jungle garden about March 1.

Permanent Endowment Sought for Hort Lectures

Horticultural graduates of Michigan State College are sponsoring a nationwide campaign to establish the "Harry J. Eustace Lecture Series" on a permanent basis.

Forty alumni have contributed the first $400 to get the ball rolling. Now the group, headed by Norton W. Mogge, '14, is looking for other horticulture graduates who will pay their $10 membership dues to the elite fraternity honoring Dr. Eustace, '01. Members hope to establish a permanent endowment for the series.

Headed Hort Department

Dr. Eustace served for a time as head of the Michigan State College Department of Horticulture, and later as vice-president of Farm Market Relations, Inc., San Francisco, prior to his recent retirement.

The lecture series, which has been held for the past two years on the MSC campus, features outstanding leaders in the horticultural field, who deliver a series of lectures to students.

Alumni desiring to contribute to the fund should write: Norton Mogge, 424 N. Mansfield, Los Angeles, 36, Calif.

Gunderson, McCarthy Retire As County Agricultural Agents

Two Spartan alumni, each with 31 years of service as Michigan county agricultural agents, have been granted retirement by the State Board of Agriculture, governing body of Michigan State College.

They are Carl E. Gunderson, and William E. McCarthy, '15. Gunderson also took advanced work at MSC. Their retirements were effective Jan. 1.

Gunderson, who received his B.S. degree from Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill., took advanced work at Michigan State in 1918. He has served since that time in Gogebic county, first as 4-H club agent, and since 1919 as county agricultural agent.

Served in Ogemaw, Bay Counties

McCarthy, who received his B.S. from MSC in 1915, served as county agent in Ogemaw county 1919-1927, and in Bay county from 1927 until his retirement Jan. 1.

McCarthy received the Distinguished Service Award of the National County Agricultural Agents' Association in 1945, and Gunderson was given the same honor in 1947.

Michigan State Asks $4,250,000 For Modern University Library

Michigan State College has requested an appropriation of $4,250,000 by the State Legislature for the construction of a new library building, according to Dr. William H. Combs, dean of the All-College Division under which the library is administrated.

Designed after extensive research into the library needs of MSC, final plans are being completed with funds advanced by the federal government.

To Accommodate 3,000

The new four-and-a-half story building will accommodate 3,000 students at one time, Dean Combs said. Present facilities accommodate, at the maximum, 1,750 students.

The library will be located southwest of and across the drive from Beaumont Tower, next to Beal Garfield Botanical Gardens. The site and plans allow for future expansion of the library on two sides.

The new structure—gross floor area, 241,859, square feet—will replace the general library, library annex (old Physics Building), and a costly, inefficient system of branch libraries in other campus buildings. The general library was built in 1928 to provide facilities for a student enrollment of about 3,000.

Present Facilities Poor

Even though present library facilities have been utilized to the fullest, Michigan State has only 56.6 per cent of the seating capacity necessary for effective study and research for its 15,000 students, Combs said.

In addition to sufficient seating capacity for present and future enrollments, the new library will provide space to shelve 1,000,000 volumes in reading rooms and large stack areas. This book

Chester L. Brewer Honored By University of Missouri

Chester L. Brewer, Michigan State athletic director for 12 years during the period from 1903 to 1921, was honored by his alma mater, the University of Missouri, as part of Homecoming festivities Nov. 23.

A large oil painting of Brewer was formally presented to university officials for permanent hanging in Brewer Fieldhouse.

Brewer, an outstanding athlete at the University of Missouri, was director of intercollegiate athletics at MSC 1903-10, 1917-18, and 1919-22. He returned to direct athletics at the University of Missouri from 1923 to 1935, and has remained on the physical education staff.

space will be adequate for some time to come, Combs said.

In planning the library, college officials considered the needs of graduate and undergraduate students and faculty members. More than 100 faculty rooms will be available for research work, 200 cubicles will be provided for graduate students, and a specially-equipped reading room will be available to blind students. Seven open-shelf reading rooms, each containing reference material in particular study areas, are also included in the plans. These are designed to give students more direct access to books.

Studied Other Libraries

So that the library would be as complete as possible, visitations to most major post-war university libraries were made by architects, Dr. Combs and Jackson E. Towne, MSC librarian. Many MSC faculty members and administrators made suggestions for the library as preliminary designing progressed.

Should the proposed new building be erected, Michigan State College would have library facilities befitting its status as a university with large enrollments in graduate and undergraduate programs, Dean Combs concluded.

Greenaway, '34, Heads Restaurant Department

Donald Greenaway, '34, head of the Department of Hotel Administration at Washington State College, has been appointed to direct MSC's Department of Restaurant Management. The appointment becomes effective Feb. 1.

Greenaway

Greenaway, who also directs Washington State's program of hotel extension, has 16 years of experience in various hotel and restaurant organizations. Included were positions as manager of the Chippewa Hotel, Manistee, and the Penn Lincoln Hotel, Wilkesburg, Pa., and administrative food handling posts with the U. S. Air Forces and Trans World Air Lines.

Schlueter Promoted

John F. Schlueter, '43, assistant director of the MSC Placement Bureau, was promoted to director in December. Schlueter, who holds bachelor's and master's degrees from MSC, has been assistant placement director since 1946.

Wives of MSC Veterinary Students Take "How to Help Hubby" Classes

Wives of Michigan State College veterinary medicine students are determined to prove that they can be much more than a smiling asset to "hubby" in his chosen profession.

Three Classes a Month

To do the job right, more than 40 wives have enrolled in a new special program of 19 evening classes offered by the veterinary school at Michigan State.

Three Tuesday nights a month, "Mrs. Veterinary Doctor" turns the dishes and kids over to "hubby" and goes to hear lectures from faculty members and take tours of the animal barns, veterinary hospital, and other vet departments.

Clark Heads Course

The course is designed to give the wives some scientific fundamentals of veterinary medicine, and also point out the right path to becoming profession-wise sidekicks for vet doctor husbands.

Guiding forces behind the new program are Dr. Chester F. Clark, former state veterinarian and head of the MSC department of surgery and medicine, and members of the Junior American Veterinary Medical Association auxiliary. The auxiliary is composed of wives of upper-class veterinary students.

Will Give Right Answers

The series contains lectures on topics ranging from "Feeding and Care of Dogs" to "Fluoroscopy and Radiology." Other courses offered are telephone etiquette, animal first aid, veterinary medical terminology, bookkeeping for the doctor, and even the veterinarian's relation to federal and state disease control programs.

"Mrs. Veterinary Doctor" from MSC will be a professional—as well as smiling—asset to her husband, and will be able to give "Farmer Jones" prompt, efficient answers if he calls when the doctor is out.

Enter Military Service

Sixty-four Michigan State College students reported for active military duty during the fall quarter. These included both volunteers and reservists, but no draftees, because present laws prevent the drafting of students during the academic year.

A New Michigan State Basketball Team Looks Sharp in Early Games

By BUD ERICKSON, '48

New head coach Pete Newell served early notice on Michigan State's 1950-51 basketball opponents that the Spartans would refuse to play the doormat role again this year.

Last season the team won only four games out of 22, but under Newell it started with a rush, taking three straight from Wayne, 51-50; Detroit, 45-31, and Marquette, 74-42.

Steffen, Stauffer Star

Newell, the coach of the University of San Francisco team that won the 1948-49 National Invitational title, had only one regular returning from last season, Capt. Jim Snodgrass. Bob Carey, the team's regular pivot man most of last season, did not report to the squad until after the football campaign and saw only limited action in early contests.

Stauffer

Meantime, Ray Steffen, a 6'4" letter-winner, took over the pivot duties and did well. He tallied 15 points as the Spartans dumped Wayne 51-50 and 12 points in a 45-31 win over Detroit.

Bill Bower and Leif Carlson performed at forwards and guards. Jim Snodgrass and Gordon Stauffer rounded out the starting quintet. Stauffer hit for 20 points in the two contests and set up numerous other Spartan scoring chances with his brilliant ball-handling and play making. Bower, a 5'10" speedster, was

Hockey Team Starts Strong; Downs Ontario Aggies Twice

Michigan State's losingest coach of 1949-50 may become one of its winningest coaches in 1950-51.

First evidence indicated, at least, that ice hockey coach Harold Paulsen, former Minnesota All-American puck chaser, may have quite a team on his hands.

Last season the skaters lost every one of their 14 games. Little more had been expected, however, since it was the first season of competition after a lapse of 20 years.

This year's team was expected to be a bit better, but no one quite anticipated a team which in its first two games against a tough Canadian college team racked up two decisive victories. The skating Spartans defeated Ontario Aggies 9-5 and 12-3 on successive nights.

equally outstanding around the boards, both offensively and defensively.

Spartans Prove Alert

The Spartans showed themselves to be an alert, aggressive, well-conditioned team schooled in Newell's semi-deliberate offensive system, a system that depends a great deal upon split-second timing and ball control to provide good scoring opportunities.

With center Bob Carey rounding into top basketball condition, Coach Newell has experimented with Ray Steffen at a forward spot to give the team valuable height around the boards. The combination will get its true test later in the season when the Spartans run against teams that average better than 6'4".

Two soph forwards, Erik Furseth and Bob Johnson, have contributed noteworthy performances in early season games to give the team some badly needed depth in the front court. Sonny Means, a letter winner, also chipped in some outstanding defensive work.

Western Conference Title Meets To Climax Winter Sports Schedules

A full winter sports schedule of dual meets, climaxed by official competition in the Western Conference championships late in the season, faces members of the Michigan State fencing, gymnastics, swimming, and wrestling teams as the 1951 season gets under way.

Fencing

Coach Charles Schmitter's 1951 fencing team, a combination of veterans and untried newcomers, faces its difficult schedule with a better-than-average chance of another winning season. Schmitter has four lettermen and several promising sophomores on which to build. Heading the list of returning veterans are Ray Totte and Al Jacobs in the foil event; Bill Pierson, epee, and John Van Dagens, saber.

Gymnastics

Prospects for Coach George Szypula's 1951 gym team point to an improvement over last year's 4-4 record in dual competition.

The Spartans' headliner again is almost certain to be Mel Stout, the county's second-ranked gymnast in all-around competition. The Spartans have several other performers who figure to score heavily in meets. Among the most promising are Al Hannas, a junior trampoline artist; Dick Richter, Bob Feldmeier, and George Kuczerepa in all-

Grandelius, Dibble Earn All-American Positions

The fine 1950 football season brought signal honors to Coach Biggie Munn and several of his players.

Coach Munn was named "Coach of the Year" by the Detroit Times Quarterbacks' Club and as such will be honored at a banquet in February.

"Sonny" Makes Three Teams

Left halfback "Sonny" Grandelius and End Dorne Dibble received first team All-American ratings. Numerous others made second and third teams and honorable mention lists.

Grandelius made the important Associated Press, International News Service and Paramount News teams. Dibble was first string defensive end on the Look Magazine All-American team.

Minarik, Dibble Honored

Both Dibble and Grandelius received two bowl invitations.

End Hank Minarik, who received various All-American mentions was to have played in the North-South game at Miami, Fla., on Christmas night.

events, and Ken Cook, sophomore specialist on the flying rings.

Swimming

The 1951 swim team will be paced by some top-flight individual performers but will not have too much depth.

Clarke Scholes, NCAA and NAAU 100-yard free style champion, heads the list of returning veterans in his favorite event, and will have help in free style events from George Hoogerhyde (220 and 440 relay), Dave Hoffman, Jim Quigley, and sophomores Bert MacLachlan and Dave Norman.

Wrestling

The loss of grappler Bill Buckingham due to a knee injury in the 123-pound class puts the burden squarely on the shoulders of Jack Hancock, a letterman two years ago, and sophomore Ruben Shehigian.

Although the 130-pound slot is undecided, Coach Collins is set at 137 pounds with sophomore Don Bassett. Bob Gang, co-captain last year, gets the nod at 147 pounds; veteran Orris Bender will handle the 157 pound spot; George Bender is a cinch for the 167-pound class, and Gene Gibbons, co-captain last year, returns again at 177 pounds. The heavy-weight spot finds Frank Kapral, a star football guard, vying with sophomore Chuck Pipher.

Gridders Ranked Eighth Best in National Polls

By FRED STABLEY

From an "in-between-year" club in early September to perhaps the top Spartan grid machine of all-time by mid-November is the amazing "rags to riches" story of the 1950 Michigan State football team.

It was the first Spartan football team ever to rank in the top ten at season's end. The nation's two most highly regarded polls, the Associated Press and United Press, placed Michigan State in eighth and ninth places, respectively.

Win Eight Games

A pre-season bet on the Spartans to defeat eight of nine opponents, including Michigan, Minnesota and Notre Dame, would have commanded almost any odds. Today, of course, it would be like money in the bank, and dazed "experts" still are asking "wha hoppen"?

What seems to have happened is this: Biggie Munn and his men weren't willing to concede that the loss of 21 lettermen from the fine 1949 team would be disastrous. They went to work with spirit and determination and met the challenges one at a time, nine of them, all but one successfully.

Sophomores Come Through

An unexpected number of sophomores came through in great style—fellows like Vince Pisano, Dick Tamburo, Ray Vogt, Deane Thomas, Frank Kush, and Ed Timmerman—among others.

Despite a plague of minor injuries, the Spartans kept going strong because every time a man dropped out, a replacement just as good or even better popped into prominence.

Grandelius Gains 1,000 Yards

"Sonny" Grandelius, known to be a good back, blossomed out as a truly great one, a real -All-American. He paced the offense, racked up a Spartan record of 1,023 yards on the ground and tied the all-time Michigan State scoring record of 72 points.

A quick review of the season:

MSC 38, Oregon State 13. The Spartans remembered that 25-20 upset at Portland the previous year. The revenge was sweet.

MSC 14, Michigan 7. In 1948 and 1949 the Spartans had come close, but no cigar. It rankled them a bit and the Munnmen hit an early season peak to wallop the Wolverines beyond any quibbling.

Receive Top 1950 Spartan Football Honors

GRID HEROES: There can be no quibbling with the statement that these four Spartan football players with Coach Biggie Munn deserved every honor heaped on them. They raked in the booty at the annual grid bust of the Detroit Spartan Club. Left to right are: Jesse Thomas, special watch award for outstanding defensive play; Everett Grandelius, Governor of Michigan Award, a watch, for being most valuable player; Munn; the 1951 captain Bob Carey, and John Yocca, winner of the Ross award, emblematic of best combined performance scholastically and athletically.

Maryland 34, MSC 6. The Green and White still was playing the Michigan game and got smacked down by a fine Maryland team.

MSC 33, William and Mary 14. Feet back on the ground again, the Spartans rolled easily.

MSC 34, Marquette 6. A bit sharper, but still looking ahead to Notre Dame.

MSC 36, Notre Dame 33. This was target No. 2 for the Spartans, and they pulled out the win after one of the most hair-raising offensive spectacles in years.

MSC 35, Indiana 0. "Remember Maryland" was the practice cry. The boys remembered and didn't sag a bit in spirit or precision.

MSC 27, Minnesota 0. This had been pre-season target No. 3, but the battered Gophers had been through the ringer too much earlier in the season to put up more than token resistance.

MSC 19, Pittsburgh 0. The Spartans racked up their third straight shut out, and held the Panthers to minus 11 yards total offense.

Sophomores Hold Key To 1951 Track Success

A track team that will be somewhat weaker than the great ones of the past few years and yet can cause some trouble in Big Ten competition is anticipated for this winter.

Bill Mack, Jack Dianetti, Horace Smith, and other stars have finished competition. Bulwarks of the 1951 team will be distance runners Warren Druetzler and Dan Makielski and hurdler Jesse Thomas. Fred Johnson, former NCAA broad jump champ and a great hurdler, may be eligible for non-Western Conference competition.

Newcomers Will Sparkle

This will be a season for newcomers to sparkle, and at least half a dozen are expected to make important contributions. Alex Andrulis, of Hart, Mich., could become the best high jumper in State history; Jim Kepford, of Muskegon, Mich., looks like a future great in the half-mile and mile; Bob McClelland, of Hinsdale, Ill., probably will be a 13-6 or better pole vaulter, and John Walter, of Buffalo, N. Y., is expected to score in the two-mile.

Lose NCAA Crown

Coach Karl Schlademan says of the season which opens Jan. 27 with the Michigan AAU meet at Ann Arbor: "We'll be down a bit from last year but still expect to surprise a few people."

Four of the top prospects for the track team were stars of the cross-country team last fall which came within two points of successfully defending its NCAA championship. Heavily-favored Penn State finally won 55-57. The quartet were Druetzler, who finished second, Makielski, Kepford and Walter.
