A good-bye kiss is a little thing,
But it takes the venom out of the sting
In the years that have flown away.

As we climb life's rugged heights.
Till 'tis bitter and hard to live.

Attendance at the College.

It is too early to give an accurate
Statement of the number of students
In this term because those who are here have not all taken out Classification cards as yet. It is known, however, that there are Attendance than ever before at this time of year. Class-rooms, Dormitories and adjacent farm houses are all crowded, and students from

Ideal College Education for Women

Allice M. Cimber, Feminian Society.

"The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," and so it is with education. It is the education of the women of our country! An ideal college education for such women should not be a theoretical one but a practical one; one whose purpose is to make stronger, nobler women.

The former idea of a college education was the development of the mental and physical powers. The latter idea of a college education is the development of the mind and not the physical powers.

No less importance is the cultivation and direction of the moral qualities of our college women. There should be a closer connection between the moral atmosphere of the college and that of life. The college women of today have much more opportunity for better generation. We do not need preachers nor political speakers to convince us that we who have the power to judge actions, motives, and opinions; women who are so right, and actions in harmony with their knowledge.

In regard to society, the educational element of society, some people claim that this is an age of atheism. This should not be so. An ideal student society is the one that is developing the spiritual nature of the student. First, we have, and shall have, our own life, our own school, and any means of education that does not respect this fact and does not do all in its power to enhance the spiritual life of the student is not worthy of support.

The question is often asked, what is the object of society? To determine this many things must be taken into consideration. One of the first things is the time allowed for the college education, and the course to pursue. There is one general principle that should underlie all, and that is to render the educational development of the mind and not the stuffing of the brain. There is too much classifying in this day and age. We need a broader channel of a man's life and turn him from what ultimately would have meant ruin.

How many times has each of us been made to suffer the severe strain on the mind. One but a practical one; one whose purpose is to make stronger, nobler women.

Some years ago a society of women who are able to take their place in the world, to earn their own living, to support themselves, were necessary to a period of development, and at the same time maintain a spirit of independence, thus the ideals of a college education have been reached.

Our College Societies.

hear, of a college in which open societies do the quality of work that is done at M. A. C. The society furnishes the literary business and social training which would otherwise be left out of our college program. In return for these benefits—for the happy and lasting friendships which spring out of our society relations, for the band of brothers who sustain us in misfortune, comfort us in sorrow, and rejoice with us in prosperity, we should be truly thankful. Always remembering that before us were men who spent much time in bringing the societies to their present high excellence, we as their successors, should use every honorable and upright means to preserve the heritage so proudly handed down to us by our predecessors.
