THE DRINKING FOUNTAIN.

The above cut will give to the readers of the Record a view of the beautiful drinking fountain presented to the College by the class of 1900. It is hewn from white sandstone rock and in size 5 ft. high with base 4 ft. 3 in. x 5 ft. 3 in. In the little alcove in front is a brass lion's head from the mouth of which flows a small stream of cold water at all times to quench the thirst of the passer by. In the rear and adjacent to the driveway is a watering trough for horses. The fountain is located about half way between Williams Hall and the Library. During the summer when the campus was thronged almost to the rear fence, there were few who did not forsake the thirst of man and beast, and the fountain will remain a useful ornament and its effects upon the college men and a blind boxing match between Smith.

The department of physics and electrical engineering has been making some minor changes in its rooms during the summer, and has added quite a little to the list of apparatus. Among them are some resistance coils, Wheatstone bridges, condensers and a number of electrical measuring instruments, all of which are first class and of the best make. Quite a little apparatus has been bought for the department of electrical engineering also. Among them being a rotary converter of 8 kilowatt capacity. This is nearly a universal motor. It can be run as a two-phase alternating current motor from our lines, power being taken from the pulley by a belt or direct current at 125 volts can be taken from the other end of the machine at the same time, it can be run as a direct current motor with 125 volt circuit, and while so run takes from the opposite end of the pulley by a belt or single phase current up to its full capacity can be taken from its opposite end, or two phase current can be taken from the other end. This makes a very valuable addition to the laboratory apparatus as it becomes a very general use.
