2. On a motion by Dr. Mawby, supported by Mr. Shingleton, THE BOARD VOTED to approve the minutes of the Board meetings of April 14, 1995 and May 4, 1995.

3. The President's report included the following:

   A. President McPherson expects to establish a regular pattern of reporting to the Board on the progress of the Guiding Principles. Vice President Greenleaf will be involved in coordinating the components to be presented by various people at Board meetings.

   The President cited the partnership with Ford Motor Company as an example of implementing the Guiding Principles. Since the early 1980s, Ford has been examining their processes and customers to determine how there might be continuous quality improvements.

   B. At the request of President McPherson, Provost Simon recognized Dr. John Giesy and Dr. June Thomas, two faculty members whose activities are illustrative of initiatives of the Guiding Principles.

      1) Professor John Giesy, of the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, is internationally renowned for using sophisticated scientific approaches to make a difference in water quality and the quality of life within the State, as well as internationally. Dr. Giesy has received a number of major awards, the most recent one being from the Canadian government for contributions to the understanding of contamination of inland waters. The award included a native carving and a stipend of $30,000 which Dr. Giesy contributed to the University Development fund to support the travels and professional development of his graduate students.

      Professor Giesy expressed gratitude for the opportunity of being at Michigan State and for having support for research through his appointment in the Agricultural Experiment Station.

      2) Dr. June Manning Thomas, of Urban and Regional Planning in the Department of Geography, is recognized in her profession as being one of the leaders in working with concepts of active learning where students are involved in real-life community projects as part of their course work. Dr. Thomas has been a consultant to the Governor on urban affairs activities and issues as well as to the Department of Commerce and nationally. She was identified by Mayor Archer to work on the Empowerment Zone proposal for the City of Detroit.
June 9, 1995

Dr. Thomas said she wished to make two particularly important comments. The work that she was able to do with Detroit in their application for an Empowerment Zone designation—which did win them $100 million from the Federal Government and $1.9 billion in total commitments from the local institutions—was, in large part, because the University supported her sabbatical leave. Also, Dr. Thomas emphasized it was a team effort that included Gloris Robinson of Wayne County and people from several universities who were involved in developing and writing the proposal. Dr. Thomas reported she was pleased and very proud to have her students actively involved working with neighborhoods in Detroit. Dr. Thomas believes the whole purpose of urban planning as a profession is to be of service, and the central City of Detroit is a good place for students to learn.

4. There were no requests for public participation on issues germane to the agenda or on other issues.
