3. President's Report

A. President McPherson commented on the rapid progress of the law school/library building and the favorable financial conditions. The approved building bid was $28.4 million, a savings of almost $4 million from the originally projected cost of $32.2 million. In addition, interest rates have gone down making this a more favorable time to issue the bonds. Moody's rating going from A1 to Aa is also a very positive reflection of the overall financial soundness of the University.

B. Dr. Mawby was congratulated for the new educational complex at Kettunen Center being named The Russell G. and Ruth E. Mawby Learning Center. The naming is in recognition of Dr. Mawby's long-time leadership in 4H programs and for his and Mrs. Mawby's interest and service to Michigan's children, families, and communities.

C. Provost Simon introduced Dayne Walling, Michigan State's 15th Rhodes Scholar. He is the fifth individual of the 15 who has been a student in James Madison College. Dr. Simon described Dayne Walling as an individual who is concerned about all aspects of learning and excels across a broad range of areas. Combining those skills and competencies, he represents what a bright, young person can accomplish by taking advantage of resources and opportunities at a great University. A video presentation included comments by his faculty mentors who were present at the meeting. Drs. Katherine See and Ronald Dorr of James Madison College, and Dr. Donald Lammers, Director of the Honors College. Also present were mentor, Dr. William Cooper, Professor of Zoology; suitemate and former Board of Trustees student liaison, Jamal Ware; and his parents, Paul and Reba Kay Walling of Flint, Michigan.

4. Guiding Principles Report

Vice President Greenleaf reported on Off-Campus Instruction--Distance Learning—which was developed in conjunction with the Guiding Principle of Improving Access. Specific areas of emphasis have been to overcome geographical barriers of access to the University and to improve opportunities for part-time and other non-traditional students.

In the fall of 1994, the President and Provost asked Dr. James Votruba, Dr. Paul Hunt, Vice President Greenleaf and several others to start planning for off-campus graduate/professional instruction to be doubled in two years. At the current three-fourths point of the two-year period, programs have increased in number from 12 to 18 and from 25 to 47 sites. Programs represent a combination of professors traveling to teach at sites and the use of interactive video and satellite technology. Based on the progress at this point and the cooperative efforts of Deans, technicians, and outreach personnel, Vice President Greenleaf expects the goal to be accomplished.

Dr. Votruba attributed the quick progress to the understanding that this is an important priority for the University. Although the focus has been primarily on graduate education, the possibility of undergraduate programs is being explored. Dr. Votruba said the next challenge will be the "just in time market, the fastest growing market in post-secondary education. It is not degree-oriented, but based on what people need to know, know quickly, and have access to in a form, place, and time that is convenient to them.

5. There were no requests to address the Board of Trustees on issues germane to the agenda.

Earlier in the meeting, President McPherson introduced and welcomed Interim Dean David Favre of the Detroit College of Law who was visiting the Board meeting.

Dr. Cecil Mackey presented the following remarks to Board Members about the partnership with the Detroit College of Law.

"About one and one-half years ago, you embarked on a unique venture in American higher education. It was a very ambitious schedule as well as a unique adventure putting together a private law school with a public university. There was no model to follow and the timing that would make it work well required a very ambitious schedule. Today at the watershed event the bids that you will accept, the bonds that will ultimately finance the building, represent unusual good fortune."

Dr. Mackey said the results represent hard work by many people: Roger Wilkinson and Lou Anna Simon for the leadership given to their staffs; Steve Terry and Nancy Craig for the financial aspects; Paul Hunt for technology; Lee June for student issues; Bill Latta for facilities planning; University Architect Norm Schleif for maintaining the schedule; Carole Armstrong for working with DCL and Business librarians; Bob Noto and Sally Harwood of the General Counsel's office; and former Provost Lee Vinder who volunteered his services. From DCL, he commented on the importance of Acting Dean David Pavre; former Associate Dean John Sovie, and Brenda Quick, current Associate Dean; and Andrea Heatley, Director of Admissions, who has been located in the new Business complex since September.

Dr. Mackey concluded his comments to the Board by saying "I want to thank you and tell you that you and the DCL Board should be proud of what is coming into existence. It is a well-planned project, carried out with excellent staff support. It has been my privilege to help in coordinating it and what is going to come of this is going to be extremely good for the State of Michigan, for this University, for the Bar, and for higher education in general. And I think you should be pleased and proud with what is manifest by the actions here today."

President McPherson thanked Dr. Mackey for his time, effort, and leadership in moving this important venture forward.

Trustee Shingleton expressed appreciation to Dr. Mackey for his contributions. He noted the University was very fortunate to have a person with Dr. Mackey's credentials, law experience, presidential experience, and relationships with the college of law.

F. At the committee meeting, Mr. Wilkinson recognized Robert Dowding of Contract and Grant Administration as the construction auditor who has been responsible for the contract bids that appear on the Board agenda. After 25 years of service and in this position since 1976, Bob Dowding will be retiring from Michigan State to join Granger Construction Company of Lansing.
